Alzheimer's Society

Leading the fight against dementia

Short changed: Protecting people with dementia from financial abuse

Policy in action

Contents

Foreword iii

Executive summary v

1 Introduction and background 11
- 1.1 Introduction 11
- 1.2 Background to dementia 11
  - 1.2.1 What is dementia? 11
  - 1.2.2 Key statistics 12
  - 1.2.3 Carers of people with dementia 12
  - 1.2.4 Dementia and mental capacity 13
- 1.3 Policy framework 14

2 Financial management, financial abuse and dementia 15
- 2.1 Financial management and dementia 15
- 2.2 Financial abuse and dementia 15
- 2.3 Prevalence of financial abuse 16

3 Experiences of money management and financial abuse in the context of dementia 18
- 3.1 Experiences of managing money among people with dementia 18
  - 3.1.1 Maintaining the ability to manage money 18
  - 3.1.2 Common problems that arise with managing money 20
  - 3.1.3 Planning for the future 21
- 3.2 Carers' views on managing money 22
  - 3.2.1 Difficulties with managing money 24
  - 3.2.2 Problems with banks and services 25
  - 3.2.3 Lack of understanding of substitute decision-making requirements 27
  - 3.2.4 Concerns about paying long-term care costs 28
- 3.3 Perceptions of financial abuse: evidence from people with dementia 28
- 3.4 Perceptions of financial abuse: evidence from carers 30
- 3.5 Perceptions of financial abuse: evidence from professionals 32
- 3.6 Common types of financial abuse and abusers identified by carers and professionals 34
  - 3.6.1 Abuse by family and friends 34
  - 3.6.2 Threats to withdraw care and support 35
  - 3.6.3 Crossing the line between caring and appropriation 36
  - 3.6.4 Entitlements and paying for adequate care 36
  - 3.6.5 Doorstep cold calling and miss-selling 37
  - 3.6.6 Rogue traders 38
  - 3.6.7 Nuisance telephone cold calling 39
  - 3.6.8 Postal scams and competitions 39
  - 3.6.9 Stranger abuse 40
  - 3.6.10 Care workers and care homes 40
  - 3.6.11 Personal budgets and direct payments 41