

You don't have to cope alone

Once you join Alzheimer's Society you become part of a powerful network of support and information

What you receive as a member

- A free copy of Living with dementia magazine each month, full of useful advice and information on all aspects of dementia
- A catalogue with details of the wide range of support information we offer, including advice on dealing with some of the specific challenges dementia brings
- A dedicated membership team to provide information and give you details of support services we offer
- A chance to have a say on how Alzheimer's Society is run and how we help people living with dementia

The Society also offers

- Support through our helpline, open five days a week, where you can receive information and advice from our team of trained advisors
- Talking Point – our online community of people with dementia and their carers
- Local Alzheimer's Society services across England, Wales and Northern Ireland which provide face-to-face support, training, guidance and information.

We're here for you

Every year Alzheimer's Society helps over 86,000 people with dementia, their families and carers. Become a member today and be a part of our network of support and information services.

The future of our work relies on people like you. The more members we have, the louder our voice when campaigning for the rights of people with dementia. Membership subscriptions also help us to continue our services and fund vital research.

As a member, you will receive our monthly magazine, Living with dementia, full of useful advice, information and personal stories about all aspects of dementia.

There is no fixed annual subscription to join us. We just ask that you give however much you can afford to support our work. If you are on a low income and either have dementia or are caring for a relative or friend with dementia, we can offer free membership.

Join Alzheimer's Society by simply returning your application form to the freepost address on the form or call us on 0845 306 0868.
Thank You.
