By supporting the Forget Me Not Appeal, you're making a life-changing difference to thousands of families.

Ian and Jan were looking forward to a happy retirement. But shortly after finishing work in 2017, Ian was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease and everything changed.

One thing that made a huge difference was a local group called Rusty Brains, run by Tim from Alzheimer's Society. One of many groups that Alzheimer's Society supports, it brings people living with dementia together for mutual support and to have their say about issues that affect them.

'That was our lifesaver,' says Jan. 'If Tim wasn't in our life, we'd be very different people.'

Whatever the story behind your Forget Me Not, please donate today to get your badge and be part of the society that will beat dementia.

Alzheimer's Society is a registered charity in England and Wales (296645); the Isle of Man (1128) and operates in Northern Ireland.

It will take a society to beat dementia
